

Bailey Brosamer

Trumpeter, Composer, Arranger, Producer
@bbrosamercomposer

Short-Form:

Bailey Brosamer is a trumpeter, composer, arranger, and producer from the Bay Area, California. They believe collaboration is the key to unlocking the individual's potential in music and are constantly looking to interact with new voices. With over a decade of experience, they are an adept improviser and actively seek to use their voice to create positive musical spaces.

Medium-Form:

Bailey Brosamer is a trumpeter, composer, and arranger from the Bay Area, California. They believe collaboration is key to unlocking the individual's potential in music and are constantly looking to interact with new voices. They have performed in many different ensembles from big band jazz orchestra to small band pop, a love for all music fueling their adaptability. As a writer, their heart primarily lies with the stylings of modern jazz fusion and large ensemble jazz. Their sextet, the Brosamer Collective is set to release an album of music originally conceived as a suite entitled "Self-Acceptance and Inspiration," featuring an eclectic mix of improvisation and fusion music. As Bailey's debut album, it is the product of countless hours spent writing, practicing, rehearsing, revising, and recording and the summation of their experience with music thus far. In addition to their work as a writer within the jazz idiom, Bailey's large-ensemble pop/classical piece co-composed with Enrico Widodo entitled "Rivers and the Sea," was performed as a part of Echoes of Home, a show at the Berklee Performance Center in collaboration with the Berklee Association of Southeast Asian Nations. In the coming months, Bailey has plans to keep writing and release more music with the Brosamer Collective as well as several large ensemble compositions. In the coming months, Bailey's arrangements will be featured in a senior recital and they will be featured as a performer in several jazz composition senior recitals. To stay up to date with upcoming performances, follow @bbrosamercomposer on Instagram. Booking and commission inquiries may be sent to pemosplays@gmail.com.